

Wrapped in autumn

Falling leaves...cooler days... and red-hot fashion. There's no better time to break out the plastic and style-up for the months ahead.

WRAP IT UP « With autumn upon us, the trans-seasonal climate and continuing conundrum of “what to wear?” can make getting dressed easier said than done, or let's face it; fashion hell. Wardrobe staples that are versatile, and perform in both warm and cool temperatures (while looking fantastic, naturally) become not only desirable, but also essential for peace of mind.

Rockpool Kikoys, or “sarongs with soul” make the transition easy. They are traditional summer pashminas made from vibrantly coloured 100 percent cotton, with an exquisite hand-knotted fringe. During the day, wear them to the beach, use as a towel, or wrap around the body to create a stunning dress. The Kikoy is particularly enviable for its gripping ability, so it does not slip off when wrapped and tied leaving you standing mortified in your bathers or otherwise, somewhat unprepared for the exposure!

In the evenings, add interest to outfits by wearing as a light pashmina, wrapping around the shoulders when the sea breeze rolls in; or wear as a winter scarf as the temperature drops further. At just $45, the Kikoy may just be the new quintessential fashion item.

Rockpool Kikoys are available at rockpoolkikoy.com.au or call Hilary Colero on (08) 9385 5446, or 0438 385 514.
